The scents, the silence, the wildlife of the Tuscan Archipelago National Park, and the views stretching to the gulfs frame a special and challenging course make the Acquabona Golf a very interesting one. Founded as one of the first courses built on an Italian island by the hands of architect Gianni Albertini, today the club is associated with the Italian Golf Federation and CONI.

Bellosuardo enjoys a unique location in the hills overlooking Vinci and offers its guests an enchanting course, both technically and scenically.

In the splendid Club House golfers can enjoy the exclusive services of the bar and restaurant where the typical local estate products are tasted. Each hole is dedicated to Leonardo, genius of the Renaissance and, next to the course, there is an itinerary suitable for adults and children.

Designed by English architect Ken Cotton in 1967, the 9-hole Tirrenia Golf Club is set in the picturesque surroundings of a centuries-old pine forest and lush Mediterranean scrubland, within the Migliarino, San Rossore and Massaciuccoli Nature Reserve. In this particular environment, the ability to manoeuvre the ball is everything: the trees and the proximity of the forest represent natural obstacles to which players must adapt.

An exciting and engaging course that is very challenging for both experienced golfers and beginners. Located in Sinalunga and easily accessible from the A1 highway between Florence and Rome, it is the ideal place to play in any season. Its proximity to some of the most picturesque places in Tuscany - Montepulciano, Cortona, the Val d'Orcia - and to one of the largest shopping centers in the area makes it perfect for spending relaxing moments among culture, art and entertainment.

An essential part of the history of Italian golf, the Ugolino Golf course is very technical, while the natural features of the place - the forest, the olive trees, the fruit trees and the sloping fairways - make it very pleasant and also technically challenging to play in it.

Playing at Ugolino is an unforgettable experience that immerses the player in a hilly landscape of rare sweetness, exciting and engaging: the writer Chris Santella listed it in his book among the "Fifty places to play golf before you die".

Atlas of Golf in Tuscany. If you are looking for a spectacular setting for a round of golf in Italy, Tuscany will not let you down: an incredible number of courses scattered throughout the region that will not disappoint your expectations.

The first real modern golf course was established by the British community in 1889 in Florence, and since then, Tuscany has turned into golfers' paradise, with a wide variety of courses in every part of the region, adding up to the beauty of its art, the taste of its food and its wine, and matching with the desirable fashion brands, artisans' heritage and fashion shopping malls.

From the coast to the mountains, this Atlas lists all of our trails, surrounded by the most beautiful landscapes: sceneries are crucial to players, as the panoramas and the views really create different experiences to golfers. Whether they're closed to the main art cities, or nestled amidst nature, most of the golf courses listed in this Atlas are extremely fun and challenging, both for beginners and for professionals, turning Tuscany into one of the most promising golf destinations in Europe.
